

Turner Moves On

Barrettine's Northern-based Technical Sales Manager Iain Turner will be leaving them to join local pest control company Alpha Pest Control as their new Technical Support Manager.

Iain, who has known Alpha's owner Mike Flynn for many years is looking forward to the new challenge. "Mike has some interesting ideas on how to take his business forward and I'm very pleased to have the opportunity to become involved", he notes.

His main regret however is leaving the Barrettine team, who he describes as a "great bunch of people, with the right approach to supporting their customers".

Unfortunately for Iain, changes in his personal circumstances mean that he is increasingly unable to continue to do the long-distance travelling with frequent overnight stops that his job with them entails. "We will continue to use Barrettine as our 'preferred supplier' and I'm confident that we will be working closely together in the future – and it will be nice to be home in time for tea, well most nights anyway!" notes Turner.

Chris Parmiter, Barrettine's Divisional Director, was quick in his praise for Iain and in wishing him well for his new venture. "Barrettine has long prided itself in the technical expertise and support that we give to both our customers and the wider Industry and Iain's contribution over the past 5 years cannot be understated on both counts".

I'm sure all that have known or been helped by Iain in the past will like to wish him good luck with this new chapter in his pest control career.
